EA Tiburon has also put in some work to make MLS stars more realistic to play as in FIFA 16. A new "Velo Tracker" has been developed that can be enabled in-game, and offers a "Set-up Positioning System" that considers the positioning of the player relative to the ball, rather than fixed positions in space. You can also use real-life players in the vignette to give players an idea of how they should "look" on camera. Here are some of the key features that have been developed for this year's release of FIFA: The New Ball: The Ball behaves and reacts differently according to the surface it is being played on, the speed of the pitch, and the game conditions. It feels lighter on grass pitches and becomes slightly heavier on artificial pitches.
