of tolerance, a concept of human rights. For Palestinian suffering, their homeland itself has no such name. – It's okay to be a Zionist. "That's not something that exists in the context of the region." I am a Zionist, simply because I believe in Zionism. I want my children to live in their sovereign state. I don't want the entire world to choose who gets to govern them and their lives. My nation will always be small, it will always be vulnerable, but this is not the case with a state of 30 million people where every single one has a stake in a better future. I want to be a Zionist. That is my decision. That is what I choose. I am under no obligation to be tolerant of the suffering of any of my fellow Jews anywhere else. They want sovereignty? We will give it to them. I am proud of my Judaism, and I am proud of my Zionism. It doesn't mean that I need to be tolerant of Palestinian suffering, or that it shouldn't be accounted for in the international discourse that questions the legitimacy of Israel. – How do you consider Tzipi Livni? She's a liberal democrat; she wants peace. And she's a human being. That's as good as anything else. – Israelis have the right to defend themselves? No. It is precisely their refusal to think beyond this right that makes them so brutal. I would argue that it is their self-righteousness that has the most to answer for. There are no human rights in a global market, or a region without borders, that permit a supremacist state to remain sovereign. – I understand that you and Nir Barkat are very close. What is your relationship with him? He is a good friend, and that is all I can say. – Do you think he will remain Prime Minister? As our country's leader, he has the opportunity to be the great leader that he is capable of being. If he wants to do so, then yes. Alteration of the glial filament, gefitinib malate.
