Photoshop CS3 for photographers and image-editing experts As with other versions of Photoshop, Photoshop CS3 (which stands for Creative Suite 3) offers multiple layers, multiple document support, and all the tools a professional needs for managing, manipulating, and editing raster images. The CS3 version also extends Photoshop's capabilities in terms of file formats (including giving you access to the newest format, the JPEG 2000 file format). Photoshop CS3 can also enhance your editing capabilities. You can download Photoshop CS3 now directly from the Adobe website (see the "Upgrading Photoshop CS3" sidebar at the start of this chapter for more information). Photoshop CS3 also features a new color-management system, and it includes a couple of major workflow enhancements, such as the ability to synchronize a raw image directly with your camera. The image-editing and photo-management capabilities of Photoshop CS3 are similar to those offered in Lightroom, a program that we discuss in detail in Chapter 5, although Lightroom contains some unique features not found in Photoshop CS3. However, you can use Photoshop CS3 for editing and organizing your photos and organizing your photos and organizing your photos files that you create in Lightroom, and vice versa. New features in Photoshop CS3 also include: * **Auto Color:** You can use Auto Color to provide Auto color adjustment throughout an image or image layer. You can use the Color Range dialog box to select a target area, and the tool converts the colors of that area to better match the overall colors of the image. * **Color Space Matching:** With the Color Matching dialog box, you can select an image in a third-party color space such as sRGB, Adobe RGB, ProPhoto RGB, or extended Adobe RGB, to make sure the colors are being interpreted correctly by your monitor. * **Camera Raw:** Photoshop CS3 now supports the latest version of the Camera Raw plug-in. You can use Camera Raw to adjust the images from your digital camera, including color tuning, lens distortion correction, and noise reduction. When your photos come out of Camera Raw, they appear directly in your Photoshop file. You can use the Camera Raw controls to check the results and make any color tweaks. If you're disappointed with the results, you can go back to Photoshop and use

Got the boot in '15, brought it home to hang up. Haven't used it that much since. I had always thought of it as a cool little piece with a unique design. This thread and others lead me to believe it's not a very good piece, nor a classic piece. I like the design, but the face shape and the height, not so much. _____ "The world is a dangerous place not because of those who do evil, but because of those who look on and do nothing" Albert Einstein Winner of the NOBIDIAN TRUST | The World's Greatest Saxon Race! We're seeing boxes being shipped to Japan. Hopefully I'll be able to take delivery and make an informed decision. I'm disappointed to see a piece that i like and love being put into the bin. Having said that, any free piece of art always has it's critics and i know I'm not the only one who thinks the dustier the better. MIRRORS Mirroring your own image: a reflection of where you're at Earlier this year I gave you a hint about where you're at, and how to grow from your current place by using a bell curve chart. Today, I'm going to show you how easy it is to add a mirror to your life, and see where you are at in your growth curve. But first... Where are you at? There's a better way to measure your progress, than by asking yourself "What's next?". So how can you look at things from a different perspective? We all have moments when we're being less productive than usual, or when it's harder to focus. But to really change where we're at, we need to measure it, over a longer period of time. The bell curve chart you saw earlier this year helps you figure out where you're at, by looking at where you are from week to week, rather than month to month. But because everyone has busy weeks and slow weeks, it doesn't tell the whole story. So how do we look at things from a different perspective? The bell curve chart The bell curve chart shows where we are from week to week, rather than month

Imagine being able to check-in at any hotel, no matter how far you are from town, and get a free drink — the beverage of your choice — at your hotel room for a week or two. That's what Robert Leonard and his wife, Pamela, offer as an amenity to guests of Howard Johnson hotels. "We've never had any complaints," Robert said. He first came up with the idea in 1993 after he saw a Howard Johnson Inn in Branson, Mo. He started visiting with his wife and checked into a Howard Johnson as a guest. "I told her, 'we should do that,' and she said, 'that's a good idea,'" Robert said. Over the years, they have added hotels and resorts including Mudlick Lodge, Cedar Point and the Ritz Plaza Hotel. "We're looking for nice, friendly people," Pamela said. "It's a business, but you have to have people that want to be in business." The hotel is open 6 a.m. to midnight and serves a breakfast buffet until 11 a.m. — usually burgers, sausage and hotcakes or pancakes. "We try to bring the prices down," Pamela said. "We are not a high-end hotel. We try to stay in the price range, but we do what we can." The hotel is set in on a two-acre lot with a pond, waterfall, gardens and a lounge area, as well as many outdoor gardens. There are more than 35 rooms and two suites. Rooms start at about $114. It gets its name from a 4-5-acre tract of land that was the site of a black settlement, Robert said. "The hotel is called the Black Lodge," he said. "It's considered a big attraction for people. You don't have to go that far. This is where Howard Johnson is. We are right in town." The Howard Johnson Hotel is a site where many people have had great memories. Randy Hayes of Fort Wayne was staying here for a doctor's appointment on June 5, 2015. "We were walking down the stairs looking for the doctor's office and the
