"We're always trying to make the game more complete," said Rob Morgan, FIFA Producer. "We wanted to better improve every aspect of gameplay, including artificial intelligence, player animations, ball physics and real-life gameplay. We've been using player motion data to improve gameplay for years, but with 'HyperMotion Technology' the impact is bigger. Fans can feel the increased physics fidelity and incredible amount of player data in the real-world performance they see in FIFA 20." New Player Models Becoming a player means more than just picking out a uniform and calling themselves up to a team roster - it means the way they feel and perform on the pitch is matched up to the clothes they wear. FIFA 20 players look and feel different to how they did in FIFA 19, and with new animations in FIFA 22 the impact players have on the pitch is even better. "You really feel like you're playing a real-life player," said Morgan. "Every player model is fully-dressed and incredibly realistic looking. This has been a focus for EA Sports this year, and the level of detail is unprecedented. I want to play it. The whole stadium turns to look at you as they see your incredible performance." FIFA 22 brings more than just fresh player models - it also brings improved animation, player movement and ball physics. Player Movement "Next-gen animation allows us to more accurately replicate player movement," said Morgan. "When the ball impacts the ground, it follows a more realistic collision trajectory. The turn of the defender as he changes direction has improved, and players now have improved reactions and reactions to contact. "When players turn to change direction, their body movement changes in a way that makes them harder to read. This responsiveness and faster reaction to contact results in more realistic-feeling ball control.” Player movement is even more responsive and fluid in FIFA 22. “When a defender is turning, players don’t slow down until they are in a different body position,” said Morgan. “They accelerate faster, and recover better from recovery.” Improved Player Reaction Improved player ball control means more realistic rebounds of the ball. As the ball hits the turf, players can read it

Hi guys I'm new at this forum so trying to learn some of the basics. I have a L2F that I had out. I hear a ton of wind and water rushes, I also have little rushing noises when she goes forward and near the dock. Does anyone have experience with a boat that can improve the wind, water and rush noises? I was thinking about getting a Spectre 1-5 or Icon wave panel. If that helps this is my first boat. Thanks
