Brushes Brushes are one of the most powerful, used in almost every image manipulation task. Brushes are used for painting, painting over images, erasing pixels, adding color, selecting objects, and many more. To add a new brush Bring up the Brush Preset Picker, by pressing command+B: Click the New Brush icon: Select a brush that you want to use for this task and click OK. Brushes are available for all art tools and Photoshop has a series of preset brush sets that you can use: These brushes are organized by textures, light and dark, and the patterns they contain. Creating a B&W Texture Brush Open Photoshop and load a photo with a great B&W image. Select the Brush tool. Choose the second texture preset, and make sure the fade mode is not set to Multiply. Put the mouse on an area of the image and press the spacebar. A selection outline of the area will be put around your drawing hand on the image. Place your drawing hand over the mouse cursor, and press the spacebar again. Photoshop brushes will now include black and white versions of the selected brush as they fill out your drawing hand. Select the black and white brush and place the cursor in the new texture inside the B&W texture set. You can now paint over the image with the new texture. You can also use this technique to make a selection from a transparent area. Creating a Patterned Brush Open Photoshop and load a photo with a great Patterned image. Select the Brush tool. Choose the third texture preset, and make sure the Patterned Brush is not set to Multiply. Place the mouse on an area of the image and press the spacebar. A selection outline of the area will be put around your drawing hand on the image. Place your drawing hand over the mouse cursor, and press the spacebar again. Photoshop brushes will now include black and white versions of the selected brush as they fill out your drawing hand. Select the black and white brush and place the cursor in the new texture. You can now paint over the image with the new texture. Cleaning up Brushes There are a number of ways to clean up a brush that is painted over the

Our Approach We know that many of you already do this, and that's why we work to create an app that can help you create a custom work flow for your digital life. As an industry we are only now beginning to get used to using big data to create more personalised and individualised solutions to the way that we interact with each other, and ourselves. The way that we do things now is becoming hard to remember, update and extend. That is because all of us are defined by our digital selves. We have bought into the idea that you can't think 'outside of the box' in the same way that you didn't think 'inside of the box' during the industrial revolution. That is why we believe that there's so much that can be done to help you to create customised solutions in the digital world. We need to take time to figure out what we do and how we work best, and that requires more than just working fast and spending money.
