Carroll, published by Wiley Publishing. Social Networking As new and exciting as the web is, most people's web surfing consists of checking their email and online social networks. Facebook, Twitter, Google+, LinkedIn, and YouTube are the five most popular social networks. Facebook is a social network and website that focuses on personal networking and sharing of information. Facebook has more than 900 million active users. Facebook was originally intended as a status updating service with the name "Facemash," but eventually it was used to organize events and see what friends are up to. Facebook was bought by corporate giant, now archrival, Microsoft for $240 billion in stock in 2009. Twitter is an innovative micro-blogging service developed by Dick Costolo in 2007. It enables users to send and post 140-character messages called "tweets," and is used by news organizations and businesses. Although only 140 characters are allowed, users often write lengthy tweets in an abbreviated form. Google+ is a new social networking service for the Google universe that allows users to link their Google and G+ accounts, and features a larger online community. Google+ was launched in 2011 and introduced a profile-like feature that has been modified over time. LinkedIn is a professional social network with more than 100 million members. LinkedIn allows users to connect with colleagues and professionals in real time, exchange information, and establish a professional network. YouTube is an online video sharing site with more than a billion users per month. It allows users to upload and view videos for free. Sending and Receiving Email If you spend your days looking at text, then a good-quality email program is essential. You can keep in touch with colleagues, your clients and vendors, and customers in a convenient manner from any location where you have an Internet connection. The web is definitely the preferred way to get information and send messages, but nothing beats sitting in front of the computer to send and receive email. Email is easy to use: just type your message, hit send, and sit back as your email

Buyer's Remorse: False Images of Minnesota Schools Still Make A Difference Tuesday, December 12, 2016, 10:25 AM In this photo, a doorstop for fourth-graders that read "We need to deal with the issues that affect us" sits in the desks of students at St. Ann Catholic School in Inver Grove Heights. Rich Garza/MPR Minnesota lawmakers set out to fix the schools they represent this session and Gov. Mark Dayton signed off on legislation designed to do just that. But as the session winds down, they've got one more thing to deal with: school board elections. School boards across the state let voters decide who should represent them in the next school year, and some incumbents have faced challengers in their rural communities. After the election, the sessions of the Minnesota legislature draw to a close. But not the work of local school boards. The work on public schools will continue. And voters will have to decide if their preferred board members will remain in office. In this photo, a doorstop for fourth-graders that read "We need to deal with the issues that affect us" sits in the desks of students at St. Ann Catholic School in Inver Grove Heights. Rich Garza/MPR The powerful "baseball bats" that are some of the most common items associated with education reform in Minnesota, are still casting a shadow this fall. When Democratic State Rep. Paul Marquart of Duluth learned his district had no public school board, he decided to start one. He couldn't get enough signatures to put the issue on the ballot, so he attached it to the local school levies, and it passed. In the end, there were enough signatures to put the issue on the ballot, but not enough voters to approve it. "Nothing against the guy," said Marquart, "but I think I have a little bit of a bully pulpit, and perhaps I'm just better at that than he is." Marquart and five other politicians are working on another ballot initiative to renew the K-12 school board. They're pledging it won't be a "baseball bat" election. But some of the issues that got Marquart's attention have lingered, and they're still spurring action. Democratic State Sen. Roger Reinert of Duluth recalls the debate over school vouchers that started

Monday, January 1, 2017 Hipster Billy Budd I knew I had seen this before. Maybe it was at the gallery showing I was at last week with my brother. I was almost certain I had seen the work before and I was right. I knew it was the Paddington, that steampunk/punk looks like art mixed with industrial design meets steampunk that looks like high street fashion. I don't know if the artist's name is Paul Sotelo or not, but it appears he's known as "Hipster Billy Budd." Hipster Billy Budd is a reference to Herman Melville's famous novella, Billy Budd and the Carpenter (1897), in which the titular character, Billy, is arrested for killing of his shipmate and fellow sailor, John Claggart (commonly known as "the Carpenter"), at the order of a senior officer. Billy is only saved when he convinces the senior officer of his innocence. After

Billy's acquittal, his life is tragically cut short. I never heard of a hipster being acquitted of a crime, but Hipster Billy Budd may be one of those punks who defy the system and are rewarded with a life of heroin and retro looks. I discovered Hipster Billy Budd by perusing Etsy over the Christmas holiday, especially the "Trash to Treasure" section. I'm always interested in anything with a steampunk-ish style. I've noticed that every artist or artist's page on Etsy is devoted to steampunk style clothing. It's hard to find actual steampunk clothing that's ugly or as ugly as it has to be to be considered steampunk; all too often it's a mixture of Pop, Industrial, and even retro. It's almost difficult to find a perfectly steampunk look, but Hipster Billy Budd's takes a steampunk look that goes the farthest out on the fringe but still keeps it consistent with steampunk at the same time. Although this is an Etsy page, it's very easy to see that Hipster Billy Budd didn't get the exposure he deserved. His shop is very small and his potential to make a lot of money by taking advantage of the Etsy stereotype of people who go against the system is limited. On the website, it also states
