Hypertrophic osteoarthropathy. Hypertrophic osteoarthropathy is a disorder in which there is excessive proliferation of bone and increased oedema. It is characterised by the development of swelling of the joints and the distal extremities, knee swelling in particular, and oedema, with the development of clubbing, cyanosis and hyperhidrosis of the fingers.

The aetiology is uncertain and there is a poor understanding of the mechanisms involved. It is present in a number of disease processes including chronic obstructive airway disease, inflammatory bowel disease and renal failure. The extent of osseous proliferative changes in the distal extremities, the rate of progression of the disease and the functional limitations are variable. There is currently no effective treatment. This article reviews the pathogenesis, management and outcome of the disease.')->addAttributeToSelect($headers); $config->setTitle($title)->setDescription('New Main Page')->setKeywords($keywords)->addAttributeToFilter('post_type', array('page', 'post'))->addAttributeToFilter('maintain_home', 0); $config->setHeaderTexts(array($title, wpkses($title))); return $config; } public function savePage() { if (isset($_REQUEST['post_id'])) { $post = get_post($_REQUEST['post_id']); if ('post' == $post->post_type) { if (isset($_POST['post_name']) && strlen($_POST['post_name'])) { update_option('siteurl', $_POST['post_name']); } else { $_POST['post_name'] = sanitize_title($_POST['post_name']); update_option('siteurl', $_POST['post_name']); } if (isset($_POST['siteurl']) && strlen($_POST['siteurl'])) { update_option(
