Autocom Delphi A . A Phase III Randomized Controlled Trial of the Effects of Acupuncture Treatment Combined with Resin Facial on Skin Appearance and Quality of Life in Adult Facial Acne Patients. Facial acne affects one-third of the world's population, including many young women and men. Clinically, the main treatment for moderate to severe facial acne is the use of topical steroids or antibiotics. Presently, many patients choose complementary and alternative medicine (CAM), including acupuncture, as a supplementary treatment for acne, but its effect on skin conditions remains unclear. To test the efficacy and safety of acupuncture treatment combined with resin facial in improving acne-related quality of life (QOL) and skin appearance and to evaluate the side effects and patient satisfaction of this combined therapy. This study was a randomized, observer-blinded, parallel, placebo-controlled trial conducted between April 2016 and June 2017
