[quote#:Wids.228979] First of all, if anyone can please help with the Audio recording & Audio editing software (Blue Cut, «Audacity«, Oktobar, Sony Sound Forge, Sound Track Pro, and many other). I've been looking, and don't know where to start because I don't even know what I'm supposed to be looking. I know you have to get a "Receiver" but I don't know what kind, or where to find one (google is just hopeless). I'm a engineer, not a programmer by any stretch of the imagination, but I have been trying to learn this stuff for the past six months or so, with fairly limited success. So far I have a PC, Audio interface, Ipod, and headphones. I can make audio CDs that work fine, (I used to use "Cd a>powercuts" to save them, but I tried playing.mp3's on my Ipod with that software and it worked about 30% of the time.) I went to the Adobe website and tried to get a program called Audacity to find out what I would need to get (since there's no room in my budget for it) and I get to a place where it says "Audio Editor for Dummies" and.mp3's just won't play on my Ipod. So I'm asking for the kind of people that will feed me.mp3's with which I can.mp3. So what I need is "A head." I need a creative solution to make a recording with a computer, and for this I'm looking for.av,.mp3,.wav,.cue, and perhaps a couple of others. NOVELTIES: Is there such thing as "Binary Audacity" with a compressor or.av render with uncompressed audio at 48kHz? I'm asking because I'm having trouble finding any info on.mp3's in Audacity at 48KHz. If anyone could point me in the right direction, I'd be forever. Thank you! Ask HN: Personal calendar solutions that let me "move" events from day to day - MrMau It's important for me to be able to move events from a particular day to another on my calendar. Example: I have a weekly class (say Saturday/Sunday) and a project deadline (say Thursday). I start working on the project Monday, but I want to keep my training session (Saturday) and the project deadline (Thursday) as scheduled on my calendar (i.e. swap).From what I've researched, the usual solutions are:* CalDAV. Not an option, I have no calDAV server* Google Calendar. Not an option, mainly because I'd need a GCP account to use it* Outlook. I know it sucks and I know it doesn't want to be used, but that's the only solution I've found so far. It's the only solution I'm using right now, for an unrelated reason. (Outlook is used by the company I work for)I'd like to be able to "leave" a day, or week, or month, or year from a calendar, without loosing the contents (events or tasks). ====== wattengard I moved all my tasks from google calendar to a kind of spreadsheet. I just keep an extra column with the dates I'm scheduled. Also I really like office suite's data connections to save data in excel if it is important. ~~~ MrMau Hi wattengard, let me know if you get a chance to write a blog post about your solution. I want to execute method A in a model B when a object in model B was changed. var B = Backbone.Model.extend({ urlRoot: '/some/url/to/server' ... A = Backbone.Model.extend({ initialize: function(){ B.on('change:number', this.someMethod, this); }, someMethod: function(){ doSomething(); } } B.reset(/* some data */); ... Now I want to execute method A only if the number attribute was changed in one of the records of B. Unfortunately I don't know how to execute method A in the model B. If I would call this.save(), what arguments would be sent to this save method? A: The collection's hasChanged method is what you're looking for. It returns true if the collection received an event with changes other than the last save, and is much more powerful than on('change:name'). Note that when you fire a change:name event, the name will be the old one, and the array of new values for every change will be passed as second argument, if you want to keep that data you can use it. As Saudi Arabia's involvement in the civil war in Yemen grows — resulting in what may be the world's worst humanitarian crisis — the Trump administration is looking to tighten its exports of weaponry to the kingdom, including Abrams tanks, to fulfill an enduring US military demand. US Customs data reviewed by Foreign Policy shows a staggering 64 percent increase in the number of laser-guided TOW missiles and other munitions shipped to Saudi Arabia last year, compared to 2017, as US intelligence agencies confirmed that Riyadh's airstrikes and ground offensives in Yemen are responsible for the overwhelming majority of civilian casualties. The data, obtained through a Freedom of Information Act request, also shows a potential increase in the number of guided anti-tank munitions like the AGM-84D LRASM, which has a range of
