Ganglioside-induced binding of acidic acetylcholinesterase to lipid rafts. We have studied the intracellular localization of acidic acetylcholinesterase (AChE) induced in the presence of lactosylceramide, a glycosphingolipid receptor stimulating AChE synthesis, in human glial cells (C6 cells). Confocal microscopy and biochemical data show that lactosylceramide-induced AChE binding to the plasma membrane is associated with lipid rafts/caveolae. It is also shown that this post-transcriptional induction of AChE synthesis by lactosylceramide in C6 cells is dependent on cholesterol. The distribution of AChE on lipid rafts is likely to be a consequence of the association of lactosylceramide with the GPI-anchor-binding protein CD22, which mediates lactosylceramide/GPI-mediated signal transduction.

Q: Validate Model of a class from another assembly I have a class WebServiceClient from assembly WCF_CLIENT with a property Collection of type ServiceClientService. This class is defined like this: public class WebServiceClient : ClientBase, IWebServiceClient { Collection services = new Collection(); } And I have a class ServicesClient from another assembly SERVICE_CLIENT with a property ServiceClientService. This class is defined like this: public class ServicesClientService : ServiceClientService { public ServicesClientService() : base("url", "user", "pwd") { } } As you can see, WebServiceClient inherits from ServiceClientService. I have a client to Webservice from WCF_CLIENT. The client calls the method described in WCF_CLIENT assembly, to get a collection of ServicesClientService, how can I validate that the Model of the class ServicesClientService is equals to the one defined in WCF_CLIENT assembly? I need to do this because I have a WCF service that works with the Models defined in WCF_CLIENT assembly. A: You can check for equality by using the override operator == in the subclass: public class WebServiceClient : ClientBase

If you want to be a doctor or nurse, you should understand how a hospital works and when it operates. Keep reading to see how this can be achieved. 1. First, you need a bachelor's degree. For some people, getting it is nearly impossible. However, some medical schools that are able to take on more students have been doing so for years. You can work part-time or full-time while earning this degree. Many schools are willing to help their qualified students and actually increase the amount of money they pay you. 2. Then, you need to earn a second bachelor's degree in order to work as an RN or BSN. That second degree can be anything you want, from working full-time to a part-time internship. 3. After getting your associate's degree, you must enroll in a nursing school or medical school. With your nursing degree, you can have a license to practice medicine and nurse. Many states have nursing schools that offer part-time or online education. 4. You must pass a national exam after completing the courses you've just taken. The tests are separate for RNs and BSNs. The tests are held twice a year, during the winter and summer months. 5. After taking all of the above, the best option is to get a PhD in medicine. This last degree will help you work as a physician and earn a living as a teacher or researcher. You'll need a strong foundation in science in order to become a doctor. Defining yourself by your profession may be shortsighted. Sure, it may be easy to say that you
