I have a C++ project included in the solution and I can create an instance of the class defined in the template. The problem is that when I try to create an instance of a class using the "Add Class" dialog it does not show the class template. Is there a reason for this? I get the same problem in VS 2008. A: I found my solution. By mistake I had hidden the [Template] attributes for the classes in the C++ project. Right click on the project and select "Properties". In the "Configuration Properties" select the "C/C++" tab. In the "Preprocessor Include Paths" tab check if you have "[Template]" attributes for the classes. Value of fractional root water concentration derived from a nuclear magnetic resonance technique in the assessment of respiratory compliance after laparoscopic cholecystectomy. Pneumoperitoneum alters abdominal compartmental pressures and, therefore, can affect cardiorespiratory function and the pleural interspace. The purpose of this study was to evaluate the effectiveness of a new segmentation technique, particularly transverse relaxation time (T(2)) imaging, in obtaining accurate and reproducible measurements of the fractional water content in the abdominal region of patients undergoing laparoscopic surgery. T(2) relaxation images were collected preoperatively and postoperatively using a cephalocaudal spin-echo gradient-echo sequence. In patients in the supine position, a 2-cm section of the abdominal wall muscle of interest was examined on axial T(2) images obtained at 1. 648931e174
